Weekly CEO Review

A 30-minute weekly review in six time-boxed parts that turns last week's numbers into one cut, one handoff and next week's top three.

BUILDER | 30 MIN | PLAYBOOK: WEEKLY CEO REVIEW

YOU WALK AWAY WITH
Last week's numbers, one thing cut, one task on its way to a person or tool, and next week's top three on your calendar.

USE IT
Grow track week 4, when you cut the activity that produced nothing, then every week at the same time.

Thirty minutes. Six parts. Five minutes each. The point is a decision, not a journal entry.

Book a recurring slot before you fill this in. Sunday evening or Monday morning works for most people. Phone on do not disturb. This is the half hour a week you act like the CEO instead of the only employee.

Before you start

- [ ] Book a recurring 30-minute slot on your calendar.
- [ ] Open your Weekly Founder Scorecard and last week's review.
- [ ] Set a five-minute timer for each part.

Week of

The week you're reviewing

1. Numbers (5 minutes)

Start with numbers because feelings lie. Enter the week in your Weekly Founder Scorecard, then copy the totals here. A zero is information.

Number	Week before	Week just finished	Change
Reach
Visits
Leads
Sales
Revenue

Biggest change

The number that moved most, up or down

Biggest drop in a rate

From your Scorecard: reach to visits, visits to leads or leads to sales. That step is your leak.

2. What worked and why (5 minutes)

Don't stop at 'that post did well'. Ask what it did that the others didn't.

What moved a number

One thing: the post, message, offer or person

Why it worked better than before

The hook? The offer? Who you messaged? When you posted?

How I'll do more of it next week

Same format, same channel, same message

> “Do more of what works, not just more.”
> ELI

3. What to cut (5 minutes)

Something comes off your list every week. Trying to do too much was one of Eli's biggest mistakes.

Took time, produced nothing

Be honest. Count the hours.

Kill or pause?

Kill: fair try, nothing moved. Pause: fewer than three clean tries, so run it once more.

4. Delegate or automate one thing (5 minutes)

Find one task you repeated that didn't need your judgment. Write it down even if you can't hand it off yet. The list becomes your plan.

Task I repeated

Same steps every time

Who or what could do it

Saved reply, automation, AI tool or a person

First step to hand it off

e.g. record it once for a One-Page SOP

If you keep doing this	Hand it to
Answering the same DMs	Saved Replies, or ManyChat for keyword replies
Typing up call notes	Granola, then a follow-up template
Writing captions and first drafts	Claude, with your Hook Bank as input
Researching competitors or a market	Perplexity
Texting back and forth to book times	A Calendly booking link
A bigger task you repeat	A One-Page SOP, then a person or tool

5. Next week's top three (5 minutes)

Specific, finishable in a week, tied to a number. 'Grow on TikTok' is a wish. 'Post four before-and-after clips and reply to every comment within a day' is a priority.

#	Priority	Number it moves	Day and time

- [ ] Make number 1 the one that moves revenue or customers most.
- [ ] Put all three on your calendar before you close this page.

> A priority without a time slot is a wish. Can't fit all three? Cut one, or hand off the task from part 4.

6. Perspective check (5 minutes)

Step back from the business. Building in vain, as Eli puts it, means chasing money while neglecting your faith and the people who matter. Answer honestly. Nobody grades this.

Did I keep my commitments to the people closest to me this week?

Did I make time for my faith, rest and health, or did the business eat all of it?

Did I do business with integrity: no shortcuts, no promises I couldn't keep?

Who helped me this week, and have I thanked them?

Am I still building for the reason I started?

> “Unless the Lord builds the house, the builders labor in vain.”

FILLED EXAMPLE

a short-form video editing service

A short-form video editing service for podcasters (hypothetical).

1. Numbers: Reach 9,400. Visits 180. Leads 6, up from 2. Sales 2, same as last week. Revenue $300.
Biggest change: leads tripled. Biggest drop in a rate: leads to sales. 4 new leads haven't bought yet.

2. What worked: a before-and-after clip of a client's podcast brought in 4 of the 6 DMs.
Why: it showed the result in the first second. My other posts opened with me talking.
More of it: three more before-and-after clips next week, same format.

3. Cut: two hours redesigning the logo. Zero impact. Kill. The logo stays as is.

4. Delegate: answering 'what's your turnaround?' DMs. A saved reply this week, a One-Page SOP next week.

5. Top three:
1. Post three before-and-after clips. Moves leads. Mon, Wed, Fri at 7 am.
2. Follow up with all 4 open leads. Moves sales. Tuesday at 6 pm.
3. Ask both new clients for one referral each. Moves leads. Thursday at 6 pm.

6. Perspective: missed Sunday dinner with family to edit, so editing moves to Saturday morning. Told one client their edit would be a day late instead of rushing it. Thanked my roommate for filming help.

Copy this every week

Duplicate this into Notion, Google Docs or your notes app every week. Keep the old ones. After a month you'll see the trend.

My weekly review:
[paste your filled review]

Do four things:
1. Tell me what my numbers say, and which step from reach to visits to leads to sales is leaking most.
2. Push back if my "why it worked" is a description instead of a reason.
3. Check that each top-three item is specific, finishable in a week and tied to a number. Rewrite any that aren't.
4. Ask me one hard question I'm avoiding.

Use only the numbers I gave you. Don't invent data or results.
